DR. L. DOUGLAS PRAISED

Sir Edward Beatty Addresses First Annual Founder's Day Dinner

"A UNIVERSITY is a society of learning whose membership is lifelong, not a factory for grinding out men and women," said Sir Edward Beatty, Chancellor of McGill University, as he addressed members of the Graduates' Society at the first annual Founder's Day Dinner held at the Windsor Hotel last night. Sir Edward emphasized the importance of a personal and collective contact between the academic staff and the graduates if a university is to fulfill its function of training men and women for leadership.

"I urge you to read such books as Dr. R. M. Hutchins, 'Higher Learning in America'; to familiarize yourself with the criticisms of universities which are heard on every side today to remember that it is only natural that universities may tend to a semi-monastic seclusion from the affairs of the world; to invite professors to address you collectively or to discuss their work with you individually; to make friends at least with some of the actual students."

Dr. W. H. Brittain, acting Principal of the University, was the second main speaker of the evening. After making some optimistic observations on the financial position of McGill, and the opening of the Douglas Hall of Residence, Dr. Brittain spoke of the founders of the University. "The founding of a university is not a single act accomplished long ago. A university partakes of the character of a living organism which must be constantly refounded if it is to maintain its health and vigour. With the names of those who have supported our physical needs and who have made possible our existence must be coupled those of the teachers, scholars, thinkers, and scientists who have made her name known throughout the world."

Both Sir Edward Beatty and Dr. Brittain spoke of the new principal, Dr. Lewis William Douglas, with the highest praise. In the words of the chancellor, "He is the type of man who wins the admiration and respect of all those with whom he comes in contact."

Mr. Fraser Keith spoke briefly in praise of Dr. Nevil Evans who recently retired as chairman of the Department of Chemistry. Dr. Evans was presented with a cheque for the foundation of a scholarship to bear his name.

Among those at the head table were Mrs. Archibald Douglas, Mrs. W. L. Grant, Mrs. A. F. Byers, Hon. A. K. Huggessen, Mr. John T. Hackett, Mr. Archibald Douglas, Sr., Lt. Col. Herbert Molson. The chairman of the dinner was Mr. H. A. Crombie.

DR. NEVIL NORTON EVANS, emeritus Professor of Chemistry, McGill University, in whose name a scholarship will be awarded by the Graduates' Society to students in the senior years of Applied Science.

Tweedsmuir Taken Ill

Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, was taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital last night shortly after he had fulfilled a speaking engagement before the St. James Literary Society. His condition is understood to be not serious. His attending physician said His Excellency would undergo an X-ray examination and would probably be able to leave the hospital today. The Governor-General came to Montreal on Tuesday, and visited the Ste. Justine Hospital that afternoon. Yesterday afternoon he attended the opening of Douglas Hall, later appeared at Convocation, and in the evening addressed the St. James Literary Society.

MACCABEAN CIRCLE WILL HOLD FIRST MEETING SUNDAY

Plans for the Year Will Be Explained to Meeting

IN UNION READING ROOM

Meeting Will Be Informal to Give New Students an Opportunity to Mix With Older Students

THE Maccabean Circle will hold its first meeting this year on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the Union Reading Room. The club includes as members all Jewish students at McGill.

The plans for the year, including social and educational projects, are being formed so as to hold interest for each individual student. Care is taken that the club's activities do not interfere with those of other campus organizations. Freshettes and freshmen will be given an opportunity to meet upperclassmen at this season's first meeting of the Circle. The meeting will be very informal, to allow students to mix with the older students.

Time will be mainly devoted to explaining the program of the Circle for the coming season, and "breaking the ice" for the first year members.

S.C.M. CONFERENCE

First on the programme of events planned by the Student Christian Movement this season is a conference this week-end at Rawdon, Que., for members of the Cabinet and committees. Led by Margaret Kinney, National Secretary of the S.C.M., and Ivor Williams, thirty to thirty-five students will join in discussions concerning the relation of the Movement to University life and world affairs. Another purpose of the conference is to plan a programme for the coming season.

Others to be present during the week-end are the three secretaries of the local Movement: Gertrude Cooke, Murray Brooks, and Neil Morrison. The party will leave by automobile on Saturday afternoon, and is planning to return Monday afternoon.

BEATTY IS GIVEN DEGREE

Sir Edward Wentworth Beatty, K.B.E., LL.D., Chancellor of McGill University and President and the Chairman of the Board of the C.P.R.

EXPLANATION OF DECORATION ON RODDICK GATES

Each Crest Has a Definite Purpose

McGill exists under two charters; one granted by a statute of the old Province of Canada in 1801 and a later one granted by a statute of the Crown in 1821.

The crest on the west pillar of the main gate recalls the coat of arms of Great Britain as of 1801 at the granting of the first charter; while the crest on the east pillar is as that on the Great Seal attached to the later charter of 1821; the difference being that while the former shows the lilies of France, these are replaced on the 1821 crest by the arms of Hanover.

The center crest is the coat of arms of Canada since the official Visitor of the University is also the Governor-General of Canada; and the arms of the Province of Quebec are there because the province has taken the place of the old Province of Canada under which the first charter was granted. The arms of the City of Montreal show the support given to the University by Montreal and its citizens.

Although the Governor-General as Visitor to the University is enabled to disapprove of appointments or to disallow statutes, the University is entirely self-governing and all property is held and all contracts are made by the Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning as Trustees only for the Governors, Principals and Fellows of McGill College. The members of the Royal Institution are also the Governors of the University proper.

I.V.C.F. TO HOLD TEA

Missionary Will Address Group on China

Dr. R. H. Glover, M.D., F.R.G.S., will be the speaker at the opening meeting of the McGill Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship on Sunday, October 10th, at 5.00 p.m. This meeting, open to all students, is to take the form of a tea and will be held in Divinity Hall, 3520 University street (near Milton avenue).

Dr. Glover will speak on China. He is an authority on the subject due to his experiences in China as a doctor, and also to his position as Home Director of North America for the China Inland Mission.

The China Inland Mission was formed in 1865 by Dr. J. Hudson Taylor under a deep sense of China's pressing need. As a young man, Dr. Taylor entered inland China over the protests of several governments. During the Boxer uprising, 65 members lost their lives and many more suffered extreme privations. In 1927, the Mission lost much of its property due to the marching armies in the interior. Following both disasters, several hundred more missionaries were sent back into the field. Today there are 1,387 of them in China, supported by friends in Europe and America. They operate over 1,000 schools of various types with 38,000 Chinese in attendance, have 4,100 native assistants, and operate 18 hospitals from Shanghai to the borders of Tibet.

CHANCELLOR PRESIDES

Portrait of Dr. James Douglas Unveiled in Dining Hall

FULFILMENT OF DREAM

Many Members of Douglas Family Present at Ceremony

IT IS my privilege to officially open the Douglas Hall of Residence. With these words and the pulling back of the McGill flag to unveil the portrait of Dr. James Douglas, the benefactor, Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada and Visitor to the University opened Douglas Hall, yesterday afternoon.

The opening was originally planned to take place on the steps of the building but owing to the unexpected shower, which broke out shortly after four o'clock the ceremony was held in the Dining hall. To symbolize the gift of Dr. Douglas to the University, a key was handed by Mrs. Archibald Douglas, of New York, daughter of Dr. Douglas and aunt of the new principal, to Sir Edward Beatty chancellor. Then Lord Tweedsmuir was requested by Sir Edward to officially open Douglas Hall.

Mrs. Douglas who gave a short address on her father's life, stated how proud Dr. Douglas was of his connection with McGill and spoke of his love for Canada in general although he spent the latter part of his life in the United States.

The Chancellor reminded the guests of the long-standing wish of McGill for a student residence and the fulfilment of Dr. Douglas' dream in the opening of the Hall. He stated that the original bequest had accumulated during the interval to over a hundred thousand dollars more than that required for the construction of the Hall; and that Douglas was but one of a group of residences provided for by the Governors of the University.

In addition to the Governor-General, the Chancellor and Mrs. Archibald Douglas there were on the Platform the Lieutenant-Governor, Dr. W. H. Brittain, H. L. Featherstonhaugh the architect, Howard Gordon, the contractor, P. F. Sise, chairman of the university building committee; and Dr. W. Bruce Ross, Warden of Douglas Hall.

Also present were the following members of the Douglas Family: Mr. Archibald Douglas, Archibald Douglas, Jr. of New York, Robert Douglas of Cambridge, Mass.; George M. Douglas of Lakefield, Ont.; Paul Armitage of New York; Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Christie Douglas, and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Mercer, of Montreal.

PROF. SCOTT TO SPEAK

Luncheon in the Committee Room in Strathcona Hall today will take place. Professor F. R. Scott, secretary of the McGill Law School, will address the students.

Liberal Landslide In Ontario

Conceded By Early Vote Returns

Premier Mitchell Hepburn rode into his second term of office as head of the Ontario government last night when the Ontario electorate enthusiastically swept him to victory at the polls on the strength of a huge majority of votes. Hepburn's victory was conceded early in the day as a large majority of Liberal candidates throughout the province ran up decisive leads over their nearest opponents.

The Canadian Press party standing at 8.55 p.m. was as follows:

Electors: Liberals 63, Conservatives 23, Lib.-Progressives 2, Ind. Liberal 1, United Farmer 1.

One of the most significant features of the election was undoubtedly the re-election to office of former Ministers Croll and Roebuck, who had recently broken with Hepburn over the C.I.O. issue. In fact, Croll's re-election in Windsor-Walkerville was conceded 90 minutes after the polls closed.

CONVOCATION HELD

Lord Tweedsmuir Sees Lieutenant-Governor Capped by Sir Edward Beatty

TRUTH IDEAL UPHELD

Prof. Corbett Says University Should Not Be Blinded by Existing Political or Economic Systems

"WHILE this foundation of James McGill will reach far into the future, here and now it is ours and upon our heads will fall the blame or praise of its rise or fall in future generations". With these words Professor Percy E. Corbett concluded his address given at the impressive ceremony marking the annual fall convocation of McGill University, which was held yesterday in Moyse Hall at 3 p.m.

One of the highlights on the Founder's Day celebration program, the convocation was presided over by Chancellor Sir Edward Beatty. Besides the host of spectators, there was a large assemblage of prominent guests present headed by the Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir.

Following a prayer rendered by the Reverend Dr. F. Scott Mackenzie the programme continued with Chancellor Beatty conferring the degree of Doctor of Laws upon The Honourable E. L. Patenaude. The Lieutenant-Governor was presented by Acting Principal W. H. Brittain, who in his introductory remarks referred to Mr. Patenaude as "Eminent as a lawyer, distinguished in his political life, he has achieved a depth of experience, a cultured breadth of view, which added to his personal charm, give him the perfect equipment for the high office he holds as Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec, and it is a source of especial pleasure to the University that it can today offer him a public token of its sincere admiration."

In turn the dignitary sincerely thanked the Chancellor for the honour which the latter had conferred upon him and proceeded to pay a sincere tribute to Universities at large when he stated that these centres "have provided men of highest value to the country" and further that "universities have a special claim upon the gratitude of the people."

Presentation of degrees then followed and a series of the latter were conferred upon the successful candidates by Sir Edward Beatty.

The final item and highlight of the ceremony was in the address rendered by Professor Percy E. Corbett. In his oration the latter stressed the all important position of Universities as the medium whereby the advancement of the "frontiers of learning" was made possible. The relations of universities the world over were referred to by the speaker as being the frankest and most cordial of all relations between human institutions and he proceeded to condemn any political or national interests which tended to sever and corrupt these relations.

Defining the relation between the university and the community, Professor Corbett pointed out that a university must needs be allowed freedom of thought and reasoned utterance if it is to keep in step with the march of time as it were. The community on its behalf could expect in return sobriety of utterance and a steadiness of judgment. The student he defined as being "essential not merely as raw material but also in the business of maintaining and increasing the world fund of knowledge."

The ceremonies were officially closed with the singing of O Canada and the national anthem followed by a short benediction.

WORLD NEWS FROM A TELEGRAPH KEY

CANADIAN

IN Ontario last night "Mitch" Hepburn was conceded victor in the provincial elections after 30 seats had already been taken by the Liberals and 26 seats far in the lead. The Conservatives were trailing with only four seats to show for their presence. The Premier retained his own seat in Elgin, which he has held since 1934.

PREMIER Abernethy's bills to establish control of the banking institutions will again be disallowed by the Federal Government. Premier King has shown that he was absolutely opposed to any action designed to curtail the freedom of the press, but he admits that the power of the Dominion Government is not as clearly defined with regard to the latter matter. Nevertheless, the Ministry hopes that it would gain general support in disallowing the bill if supported by the press.

BRITISH

THE Labour Party in England adopted a platform which should prove of wide general interest. They called for: the nationalization of the Bank of England and of land, control of investments, transport, coal mines and electric power. They declared that the party's aim was a Socialistic Commonwealth, the maintenance of peace and democracy.

SHANGHAI

THE once prosperous city of Shanghai is now in ruins. In face of this fact, it is interesting to note that both the League of Nations and the U. S. A. have condemned Japan's invasion of China, and awarded the Chinese "moral support." The conclusions of the American government that "the action of Japan in China is inconsistent with the principles which should govern the relationships between nations" is in direct accord with the decision of the League of Nations. This leaves no doubt that the U. S. A. will collaborate with the League to the best of its powers.

CHINESE forces took the offensive yesterday in a sharp counter-attack from their entrenchments ranging all the way from the ruined native quarter to Lotien, almost 25 miles north of that point. The fighting, however, still remains in a condition of stalemate. Japan achieved little or nothing in a series of air raids on several Central and South China cities.

LOCAL

EXEPLHAT Benoit was condemned yesterday to be hanged

for the murder of Hyacinthe Cote by Mr. Justice Lazure. Addressing the court, Benoit protested that he was innocent, laying the blame on Gauthier, his co-accused, who had turned witness for the Crown. Justice Lazure stated that he believed the trial a fair one, and, under these circumstances, was forced to pronounce sentence.

THE English-speaking aldermen of the city will today present their case for the appointment of two English-speaking members on the five-man Board of Revision. Their argument is, that since at least four-ninths of the property taxes are paid by the English, at least two-fifths of the board should also be English. The slight discrepancy in fractions could then be altered by a member of some surgical institute.

Montreal, Thursday, October 7, 1937
Vol. XXVII—No. 6

The phrase "university life" carries to most people an impression of a sort of congress of youth, where young people pass their time in each other's company, living a life apart from the common things of ordinary existence, and, in short, enjoying an experience which they can never hope to duplicate later. This impression is probably correct in the case of many universities, but we doubt if it could ever have been so in the case of McGill. The reason for this shortcoming has been, in great part, the lack of a student residence. The main body of students live in the city itself, and return home when their classes are over, while those from out of town, who should, by rights, form the nucleus of the university community, are scattered hither and yon, living where they can find a fairly suitable bed and breakfast.

The remedy for this situation is, we feel, well on the way. Douglas Hall, now in use, is the first and greatest step toward the founding of a real McGill community which will take its due place as an integral part of Montreal.

To the individual student, the benefits of the new residence will accrue most strikingly. No longer will the out of town man, who comes here knowing nobody, be limited in his choice of friends to those few people with whom he comes in casual contact during the course of his studies and lonely meals. He will have the companionship of infinite variety of types and characters, with whom he will actually live, not merely exchange the banalities of the campus encounter. To those who have not experienced life in such a community before, it will be a rich experience, rich in pleasure for the most part, rich too in lessons in getting along with people, and especially rich, although this may not be academically desirable, in colourful conversation and anecdotes of an entertaining nature brought from all over the continent. And how much more cheering it will be to the weary student to return in the evening to enter the clean and beautifully designed hall of the new residence than to open a door into the musty odor of Victorian red plush in the dim hallway of the average boarding house.

Scholastically, too, Douglas Hall should prove an aid to the resident. Of all modes of study, none has as yet been found which excels the tried and true bull-session, that smoke-hazed gathering of frightened men under the shadow of approaching examinations. In Douglas Hall, the bull-session should reach a new peak of effectiveness. The boys will be able to foregather on a moment's notice, all books to hand and a large room at their disposal.

The opening of Douglas Hall is, we hope, only the first step in this direction. As more and more students are given accommodation, so will the pleasure and the worth of the "university life" at McGill increase.

In spite of the fact that the Convocation ceremonies in Moyse Hall yesterday were well attended by Undergraduates, it is a lamentable fact when every freshman and at least the majority of Undergraduates were not present.

There is no occasion at this time of the year when students in all faculties and all years can obtain a finer perspective of University life in general and McGill life in particular. It is at some ceremony such as Convocation where the ideals and principles which have in the past so greatly added to McGill's reputation as a "centre of learning" are referred to again and again and it is on such an occasion that we realize what University life is.

Yesterday's Convocation was an exceptionally impressive one due to the fact that McGill was paid the signal honour of having present both the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec and the Governor-General of Canada. The Hon. Esioff Leon Patenaude who was presented with a degree of Doctor of Laws by the University paid tribute to the Universities at large and McGill in particular.

Prof. Percy E. Corbett presented the address to the graduates in which he pointed out the relationship which exists between universities and university graduates everywhere as being probably the most frank and cordial to be found in society.

Universities themselves are moreover merely what the students attending them cause them to be. All in all, judging by yesterday's convocation we may say that our university is now at the threshold of a new era.

STORY COLUMN

You Have a Story

WHILE the club members applauded, the poet—the spokesman of the people—slowly descended the plush-cushioned steps with his guitar under his arm. His legs bent stiffly from stair to stair. His long lecture had covered a range of emotions, exhausting him, had made him feel tired and spent.

Jane watched the poet. She put the program in her purse. Alexander Johnson, the poet, white hair on his head, talking and singing to all these people. Reading the tasty, humorous lines in his book so that they, having laughed, may think their evening unwasted. And they come, simpering creatures in glossy fur coats, sprawling babbies in rimless spectacles, intellectual young Jews, they come to hear Alexander Johnson, the man who has made himself famous, not to listen to his poetry.

His toe in its heavy square boot felt for the last step.

Jane saw the poet advance. Now. It has got to be now. Rising. If I'm ever going to be a newspaper woman. . . I'll have to get used to doing it. He won't refuse. He'll understand. With greedy intent she sprang forward. His eyes are so brown and kind. Now. I've got to get a good story.

"Mr. Johnson," she said, reaching his side, her eyes intent and resolute. Must get that story. He worked on a paper once himself. He'll understand, even though this is just a college paper. And my mother knew him there in Columbus. "Mr. Johnson?" He paused. "I wondered. . . the DAILY would like to have an interview. . . It's the college paper, you know." Say yes, say yes, please say yes. "Could you? Tomorrow? Tonight? Any time at all. . ."

Shifting his sounding guitar to his left arm, he felt for the smooth cold door-knob. Smooth. Hundreds of groping hands smoothed this. Lots of them dead now. A small monument to them. He waited silent, opening the door slowly, pausing. "But you have a story?" he slowly said. "You have a fine story now. I know. I worked on a newspaper once myself."

"Yes. You knew my father," she said helplessly. "In Columbus. His name was William Hyde. You worked on the same paper. You did movie-reviews together sometimes. And. . . He was speaking. They were by the table now."

"Bill Hyde! Well," a kind slow drawl, "so You're his girl. Bill Hyde. . . What's he doing now?"

"He's dead," she said calmly.

"Oh," he said softly, stooping sympathetically over the table, opening his guitar-case.

Very quickly she pursued, "And my godmother, Jane Digby, you knew her too."

"Yes," he said, pausing protectively, leaning over his guitar. "Of course. I knew her very well. Jane Digby. Well. . ."

My god hurry. Before the president gets here. I know what he's going to be like. He's icy. He'll stop me before I get anywhere. He hates the DAILY. All newspapers. I've got to get that interview. It would be something.

Alexander Johnson stood silent, fitting his guitar precisely into its grey case, lingering reluctant like a dog who, called to come, continues with concentration to sniff grass-roots.

The ante-room door was open. An autograph book, with a pen stuck in it, was suddenly being held out by a blond young man. Where had he come from? Suddenly there. Materializing. There.

"All right," said the poet, eager for escape, "I hope nobody sees me," He signed. Men began creeping softly into the holy presence, intruding in tiptoes.

Jane could see the net drawing in.

"But all the papers in town will have this story." Besides Solly was covering it. "We'd like something our own." He looked up, restive. This moment, now, was the only time: "You were editor of your college magazine, weren't you?" She had been reading a sketch of his life in Untermyer that morning.

"Why yes. Yes. So I was," he said softly, surprised; remembering back through his preoccupation. Way back then.

"Did it get you started writing?" Immediately conscious of inept phrasing: "I mean, don't you think it helps a writer, to see his work in print? Don't you think every college should have a magazine?"

His slow flexible voice intoned itself into her mind. "Yes, I certainly do. It can be a great help." A great help.

Oh, there he came. The overbearing bulk of the president pushed between them. A thickness eclipsing the sun. An iceberg denting a broken skiff.

Up to the table, brushing her aside. His giant hand clapped heavily on the poet's shoulder with the encouragement of a patron. "Splendid, Johnson, splendid," he shot at him crisply. Quite cricket. His guest. The poet did not answer. She was glad. He knew how to not answer. . .

He was talking to an earnest-eyed young man in grey who had sat in the first row, his lips parted with devotion. "In the afternoon. Yes," the poet was drawing, "I'll be very glad to. Bring it with you." More people were drifting and pouring in. Congratulating. Arguing culture.

"Thank you," breathed the young man, his earnest eyes ardent with gratitude.

A Scotchman, the secretary of the club, began helping the poet into his greatcoat as he steered him toward the two friends he was burning to present. "Alexander Johnson!" he beamed; "Mr. and Mrs. Akerby."

Mr. Akerby looked foolish. He giggled. His wife prodded him as she swooped up. Her face close to his, Mrs. Akerby shook hands with the poet. Her rich fat face oozed into a smile.

Her voice was high and relaxed. "Alexander Johnson!" She drew back at arm's length, the better to behold him. "I enjoyed it so much this evening. So much. . . A poet. Real printed books. That charming woman in Montreal. He'll always remember me."

"I wonder, would you mind repeating that line?" giggled Mr. Akerby in fatuous self-consciousness as his wife threatened him with a glance. That line from the beginning of your poem. So clever. Thing to say to a poet. Flattering.

Jane was annoyed. Why were these people butting in so that she couldn't make him say anything? She drew nearer with a belligerent mouth.

At a loss, the poet was silent. He had read the first section of the poem entire. "Which line?" he said gently, drawing his coat around him.

"Now Henry, can't you see that Mr. Johnson is tired? Mr. Akerby is so thoughtless," she said. Her luscious smile ebbed into reproach as she flashed a detaining diamond on the tweedy folds of her husband's thick sleeve.

"Is this the one?" he asked in a groping tone which lowered into smoothness as it murmured the line itself.

"Oh, delightful. Thank you so much, Mr. Johnson."

They departed as the president again bore down on his prey, the poet. He mustn't get tired out before my reception. All these people. Waiting. My guests, after all. Must be in good form you know. "I believe we can continue our conversation in the automobile?" he suggested commandingly.

"How long did I speak?" asked Alexander Johnson, buttoning the top button of his coat.

"An hour and fifty minutes," said the secretary. "And how I enjoyed it, every minute of it."

"Thank you," said the poet, inclining his head. "And hour and fifty minutes. Hm. . ."

Jane drew close in hopeful doubt. He has to say something. Anyone with those sad kind eyes, anyone. . . He can't keep refusing. If I don't give up too soon. Perhaps he's just holding off to see if I'll give up before I ought. Say something. About trends in modern poetry.

"Then you really mean it, Mr. Johnson?" she said quietly, braving the far-focussed stare of the president as it pierced through her. I might have an invisible stone under my tongue. The annihilating gaze drove through the substance of her body. "You won't say anything at all for us?" He put on a glove. If the president realised that she was from the college paper. . . DAILY. . . She no longer dared mention the word, DAILY, standing between those eyes of blue ice and what they were aimed at.

The president moved impatiently. Reception. Guests arriving. Auto right outside the entrance. Beastly nuisance, that girl. Can't she see Johnson is tired? Trying to probe things out of him like that when he has just lectured two hours and is worn out. Where did she come from anyway? Really too much. He won't be in good form at all by the time we can get him to the reception. Canadian girls have too much cheek. He looked at his watch. Thirty. "See here now," he cut across the room at large, sweeping the walls with his authority, "Mr. Johnson's extremely tired. Come along, Johnson, the automobile is at the entrance." He took him firmly by the elbow. The poet looked as though he were eager for deliverance.

Jane could just hear him saying quietly, slowly, "Yes. You have a good story. As it is. . . A good story." Buttoning the last button of his coat with determination.

"Excuse me," her words were final, pettish and annoyed. So she hadn't got anything after all.

She caught then, suddenly, with understanding, a tired dark sadness in his eyes. His hair, by contrast, was very white. He looked very much alone, surrounded there by swarming people.

Pitt Editor Quits Under Censorship

Leopold Koeberlein, student editor of the Pitt News, resigned today in protest against what he charged was a "censorship" imposed after a columnist had written a highly critical appraisal of the late Andrew W. Mellon, one of the University of Pittsburgh's greatest benefactors.

Koeberlein said his resignation will stand until Pitt authorities decide to "reinstale the policy of a free student newspaper." The columnist was Robert Saffron, author of a column of opinion entitled "If I May Point." In last Friday's Pitt News, he wrote:

"Now that Mr. Mellon has died another of the plutocratic oligarchies carved out in the days of the 'robber barons' has entered the honor roll of foundations subsidizing charities, art and education. I do not blame Andrew Mellon, the man. . . He was as much a victim of 'the system' as the poor suckers who contributed to these fortunes."

The News today carried a letter from the faculty administration members of the publication board announcing that in the future all copy "will be reviewed by the faculty adviser with the editor."

The Decline of Rah-Rah

The decline of a kind of graduate life that may be suggested by a few words from its special vocabulary—the college life of "studes," "frosh," "profs," "old grads," "prexy" and general siss-boom-ah—may be viewed with alarm in the most remote and retarded of fresh-water colleges. Elsewhere the rah-rah days (which the older Eastern universities began to outgrow a generation ago) are already the merest remembrance of childish things; the days when college letters entirely covered the chest of a heavy turtle-neck sweater, and a bulldog pipe with class numerals and the "frat" pin also stuck out like a sore thumb, the latter, sometimes, in extreme cases, buttoning back the turned-up front of a wide-brimmed pork-pie hat.

Class distinctions of any sort seem to be blurring, a freshman and a sophomore with similar background and tastes often becoming thick as thieves, according to Dean Gauss of Princeton in a recent magazine article.

It is beginning to be suspected on all sides that, among other things, a college or university is a vantage point from which the life of one's time and its deepest background may be studied purposefully for four years or more, rendering unto the football team the regular yells that it is accustomed to, but no longer fearing general ideas and scholarship as unfitting young men for life.

New York Herald Tribune, October 2, 1937.

GOOD FOR A SMILE.

Tourist (in Yellowstone National Park)—"Those Indians have a blood-curdling yell." Guide—"Yes, ma'am, every one of 'em is a college graduate."

CO-EDITS.

CAN IT BE?

It would seem to the casual observer that the colleges of the South and Middle West States do not in reality enjoy the popularity with which they are reputed on the silver screen or in the collegiate novel. They are, in fact, so small that they are known only to their president and God; and competition among them is so great that prospective students are being bribed, bought and even kidnapped in order to build enrollments; while sales tracts resembling illustrated booklets for a country club proclaim that college life is not all study.

We'd like to make the comment that this leaves us speechless—and there's more truth than poetry in that.

PROBLEMS OF A JURYWOMAN.

Now that women are allowed to serve on juries in New York, the big question is what kind of hat to wear during an arson trial, and what colour to tint the nails during "Mate-Slays-Mate" case.

APPLE DUMPLING.

The latest news on the Big Apple via Arthur Murray, inventor of the Murray-Go-Round, tells us in one breath that the brawl combines the best features of a square dance, swing music and a revival meeting—and that those who have done it say that there is nothing like it. And who are we to sow the seeds of doubt? You shag, you truck, then you slip into a double Charleston and then if you still feel up to it, you do a snappy little number with your partner described by those in the know as a "shiner." After that you are on your own and may the shades of Pavlova be with you.

VICTORIA REGINA.

One of the latest and most successful British pictures, in fact one which even Hollywood could not have bettered or indeed even equalled is the masterpiece "Victoria The Great." Miss Anna

SENIORS SET FOR WESTERN RUGBY OPENER

Hamilton Back for Intercollegiate Tilt at London Saturday

McCONNELL UNCERTAIN

Injured Knee May Keep Backfielder on Sidelines — Beveridge, Smith, Dunphy Make Grade—Western Fast

UNDAUNTED by heavy rains and a sloppy field twenty odd senior footballers whipped through a hard scrimmage last evening at Molson Stadium in preparation for the all important opening game with Western in London this Saturday.

Alec Hamilton

Head Coach Doug Kerr turned the Reds against the seconds and after a long session of offensive and defensive play, the boys were stacked up against the freshmen in another heavy scrimmage.

Throughout the drill the Redmen showed good form with their plays clicking neatly, and enthusiasm over their chances continued to rise. Alec Hamilton has completely recovered from his head injury and his return lends strength to the team both offensively and defensively. His passing and kicking especially, will take the load off Cam MacArthur and let the blond plunger turn to his chores of smashing holes in the line.

Russ McConnell is an uncertainty for the starting lineup on Saturday, and if he is unable to take his place in the backfield, Jimmy Dunphy will be pressed into duty. Dunphy along with Massie Beveridge and Chuck Smith were given places around the training table Tuesday, and there remains one more place to be filled for Saturday. Beveridge is a flying wing and Smith a linesman.

Twenty four men will be carried by the team, with twenty making the road trips. Just who will fill the remaining vacancies is not known but will be picked from the seconds who are working out with the seniors.

A win for McGill at Western will send the Redmen away to a flying start, and cut them in better spirits for the annual classic with Varsity the following Saturday. Western have been ruled as pre-season favorites, but since Varsity upset Balm Beach last Saturday the odds have switched a little.

WESTERN FAST

Western is stated to have a light team, young and fast. Coach Bill Storen, since his bright record at St. Mike's where his forward passing plays startled Ontario, will again lean heavily on the aerial attack.

Meanwhile at Toronto, Milne, a fleet backfielder, is suffering from a broken ankle suffered in the Balm Beach game. An interesting note for McGill fans is the fact that Ken MacQuarrie, a Red backfielder of three years ago, is lining up with the Blues.

QUARTER-FINALS REACHED BY NET TOURNAMENT STARS

DUE to the heavy downpour yesterday afternoon, the annual fall tournament was delayed and all matches scheduled for late yesterday afternoon are to be played today.

W. O'Brien, seeded first in the tournament, encountered surprising opposition from Rutherford earlier in the afternoon, but after an uphill battle, overcame his rival in three hard fought sets.

Upsets were few as all six seeded stars are yet to be eliminated. Results of yesterday's matches follow:

Tetreault defeated Heron. Dessaulles defeated G. Kaneb. Jacobson defeated M. Kaneb. Smith defeated C. Bishinsky. (Default).

W. O'Brien defeated Rutherford. McMartin defeated Archambault.

Hubbell Bombed From Mound as Yanks Win Game

TO THE thunder of 60,000 rabid fans, The New York Yankees humbled their National League rivals, the New York Giants, by the score of 8-1 in the opener of the 1937 World Series Classic yesterday. Carl Hubbell, the Giant's screwball ace, was blasted out in the sixth inning after retiring fourteen Yanks in a row and allowing only one hit. In that canto the Yankees smashed Mr. Hubbell's best efforts for five blows and seven runs driving the much touted hurler from the mound. Lazzari knocked out the only homer of the game for the Yanks in the eighth.

Meanwhile 'Lefty' Gomez held the Giants to six scattered hits. Jimmy Riddle, formerly of the Montreal Royals, played well for the Giants, scoring their only run in the fifth and making a spectacular one-hand catch of Gomez' hard drive in the eighth. The second game of the series will be played this afternoon beginning at 1:30, with Melton, rookie left hander on the mound for the Giants and big 'Red' Ruffing doing the twirling for the Yanks.

FROSH READY FOR LEAGUE GAME AT BISHOP'S SATURDAY

WALLY MARKHAM COACH

Good Punters Backed by Heavy Line—More Men Wanted to Fill Vacancies

ON Saturday Coach Wally Markham will lead the McGill Freshman Football Team into Lennoxville to tackle Bishop's College, in the opening game of the league schedule.

Just how this year's team will compare with teams of former years will be fairly well answered at this game. In the past Frosh teams have shown plenty of class. Coach Kerr has obtained such stars as Hamilton, Merrifield and McConnell, to fill the senior vacancies left by graduation from Frosh ranks.

The boys have been practicing hard, and those who have turned out are learning the systems that have proved successful in past years. However, the material is not only too plentiful, and a few more huskies would be welcomed at the practices.

LINE HEAVY.

On Saturday, the kicking will be handled by Johnny McClurg and Perry Foster. These two men have shown in practices that they know how to get good results from their efforts. They will be protected by a line that has plenty of weight, and if they possess the right tackling ability, the Bishop's boys will need to be good to do much damage.

The last few practices have been featured by heavy scrimmages to put the boys into the proper physical condition. Tonight and tomorrow the program will be mostly drilling of plays to prevent slips.

TRACK MEN PLOD THROUGH MUD AS MEET DRAWS NEAR

AMONG the hardest working sport enthusiasts at this university are the track men who yesterday plodded along on the muddy track undaunted by the hammering pellets of rain. The track team is working on every possibility in order that a team with sufficient balance to offset the lack of superstars may be produced. Coach Van Wagner is recognized as one of the slickest men in the country when it comes to choosing a track team and placing them in the spots where points may be gained and championships won even though other opposing teams possess a galaxy of stars.

HOPES RISE.

Track hopes have risen of late due to the rumors that certain of Toronto and Western's chief men will not be eligible or will not be back in school since the British Empire Games are to be held in Australia this year during the winter months. Under this category fall Loaring of Western and O'Connor and Brown of Toronto. Some in the know also claim that Conway of Toronto and Ferris of Western will not be running this fall, but nothing certain is known. McGill's men are shaping up well, Mason in the sprints and the quarter looks good; Frankton and Todd in the three-mile and Quimby and Cooke in the mile are safe bets. Captain Morgan is throwing the discus to great distances and Love is hurling himself over dizzy heights in the pole vault, rain or shine.

There is still ample time for new men to come out and train. Since there are still many places on the intermediate team to be filled, all new candidates will be given every opportunity to do their stuff and develop their track talents. Remember to keep Sports Day, October 14 open and come out and support your hard working track team.

MEET AT TORONTO.

The senior Intercollegiate track meet is being held in Toronto on October 14 and McGill is out to retain the laurels which they have held for the last seven consecutive years.

Stage Superstitions

An actress must find or have a rabbit's foot given her, it is fatal to buy one. It is bad luck to whistle in the dressing room or to put shoes on a shelf. An umbrella opened over the head is of course the worst kind of a thing—but it is all right to open it downwards. Cats bring good luck, especially black ones. A potato in the pocket shields from misfortune. Next to breaking a mirror, bringing pea-cock feathers into the theatre is a calamity, and many an actor will grow faint at the sight of one. It is also unlucky to throw a hat on a bed.

SPORT BRIEFS

Eddie Baker, Sports Editor of the Ottawa Citizen, succumbed to a heart attack in New York Tuesday. He was widely known as a racing official and took an active interest in all track activities.

The University of Montreal Athletic Association is looking forward to a very successful hockey season this year. They have entered the Montreal Intermediate League and hope to give our boys some strong opposition. Intercollegiate representations are also anticipated in golf and tennis.

WELSH COAL TRADE

Orders From Three Areas in British Africa.

Considerable interest was caused on the Welsh steam coal market recently by the receipt of orders from sources which normally place very little, if any, business locally. The shortage of coal in South Africa was directly responsible for this and some orders were received from East and West Africa. The Kenya and Uganda Railways divided an order for about 50,000 tons between local and north country shippers, the larger proportion being placed in South Wales. Some business has also been arranged for the Far East, while inquiries circulated from India and Singapore. Meanwhile, however, business remained restricted in all the principal trades, but in spite of this, sellers were showing greater reserve and a firm tone ruled—Engineering (London).

War Luck

In the United States Civil War a Union private had the luck to find, wrapped around a handful of cigars, a copy of General Lee's orders to another Confederate commander, giving full particulars of what the Confederates planned to do for the next four days—a fortune which seldom happens to a commander on the other side.

SOCCERITES LOSE TO VILLE EMARD UNDER ARC LIGHTS

Whitewashed 6-0 at Molson Stadium as Muddy Field Mars Play

FACULTY PLAY TODAY

Engineers Meet Artsmen in League Opener at Upper Stadium — Seniors Versus Wm. Reed Co. Saturday

PLAYING on a rain-soaked field at Molson Stadium last night the McGill soccer team suffered a 6-0 defeat from a lighter and speedier Ville Emard team in an exhibition game. Ville Emard showed more power on the offence and scored three goals each half period. The Red team missed the services of its regular goalie, Snell, who was unable to attend. Tetreault, who filled the gap, was playing in goals for the first time and turned in a steady performance being called to make many head saves.

Shortly after the opening whistle J. Forest scored Emard's first goal from a scramble in front of McGill's goal. The play then shifted to the other end of field and Emard's goalie, Fetreage, was almost beaten when in a series of shots McGill men couldn't score. Footing was difficult but in a beautiful passing play Rideout of Emard scored their second goal.

IN AMERICAN CAMPS

Despite the improved brand of football that Dartmouth displayed against the Lord Jeffs Saturday, it is going to take a lot more improvement on the part of the Indians before they are ready to leave home and invade foreign territory. With Springfield alone out of the unbeaten and untied class the Green squad is due to meet plenty of opposition as it nears the latter part of its schedule.

As far as Paul Stagg's Springfield eleven is concerned, the Indians should have nothing to fear. The Gymnasts tried hard and did the best they could against Harvard with the unorthodox formation that Stagg teaches, but the Crimson literally ran rings around them in routing them to the tune of 54-0.

Apparently Brown's opening victory, the first in several years, gave the Bruins the winning urge, for they repeated Saturday in triumph over a fighting Rhode Island State squad 13-7. The Providence team staged a 50 yard march for their first score in spite of stiff resistance from the Rams and then proceeded to work into position for another score in the first few minutes of the last quarter.

The Bruins travel to Cambridge next week to meet a Harvard team which may prove to be a potent threat for eastern honours. Last year the Crimson ran up a 28-0 victory and Saturday's game should provide a yardstick for both squads. Against Springfield the Harvard squad scored almost at will, converted six times in eight tries, and kept up the merry pace for a full four quarters. The Crimson was anything but a one man team as the backs politely took turn in carrying the ball into the end zone and the linemen missed but few assignments. Dick Harlow said at the close of the tilt that it was the best blocking and tackling team that he had had since he had been at Harvard and Stagg called the Crimson a finished team, a real threat in the East.

YALE UNIMPRESSIVE

Yale took over the Maine Black Bears Saturday by a 28 point margin, but with the exception of two scoring urges looked sluggish and unpolished. Having pushed through a score in the first few minutes the Blue settled down to a dull first half in which the invaders did not threaten or give much ground. Opening the second half in true Yale style, Al Wilson made a 90-yard runback of the kickoff, and before the Maine squad had recovered Frank had tossed a couple of scoring passes which ended the Blue's efforts for the day. Despite the fact that passes netted Yale two of its scores the aerial attack fell far short of what it was a year ago.

On the defence the Pondmen used a 5-3-2-1 formation with Bill Platt, junior right tackle, backing up the forward line with Fullback Dave Colwell and Centre Frank Gallagher. In spite of this the Bears made seven first downs while the favored Blue squad was able to make but 11. All in all the Eli needs a lot of practice before they meet real opposition.

Princeton Unknown Quantity.

The Princeton Tigers opened their 66th grid season with a 28-0 win over Virginia. As yet the Tiger is something of an unknown quantity.

and point. Their next goal came soon afterwards when Priestley kicked in a fast shot. Emard kept threatening but the McGill's defence tightened. Ruud did some excellent blocking and broke up many plays. Tetreault made three consecutive saves as the first period ended with Emard's team still on the offence.

SECOND HALF

In the second half, after Emard had taken the first shot at McGill's goal, the red team staged a brief rally in which Archer and Horsnall led a concerted attack on the enemy's defence. But to no avail—the tide turned against the Redmen again, and Reid scored for Emard from a corner kick. In the last five minutes of the game Emard netted two more points on goals by Jones and Miller.

Rideout and Reid were best for the winners. Horsnall, Ruud and Thatcher played solid and good soccer for McGill. Coach Hay Findlay was far from discouraged by the red team's showing, and after experience gained in a few more exhibition games expects a championship Intercollegiate squad. For this Saturday an exhibition game has been arranged with Wm. Reed Co.

The lineup was as follows: McGill. Position. Ville Emard. Tetreault.....goal.....Fetreage. Ainsworth.....right full-back.....Card. Laing.....left full-back.....Spencer. Scott.....right half.....Dorval. Horsnall.....centre half.....Miller. Ruud.....left half.....Reid. Baranofsky.....right outside.....Ried. Thatcher.....right inside.....Jriels. Trials for McGill Golfers Tomorrow

TOMORROW afternoon the first tryout for the 1937 McGill golf team will be held at the Grovehill course. The second and final tryout will be held at Summerlea course which is the scene of the Intercollegiate tournament. The manager in charge of the tryouts wishes all those interested to come out as early as possible in order to get as much golf in as possible. Lists are posted in all the buildings on which you may sign up for the tryouts. Freshmen are particularly invited to sign up.

There are a number of vacancies on this year's team and the race for these places is a wide open affair. The meet itself is divided into two parts. On Friday, October 15 the individual champion will be

Books

Today is the last day the Book Exchange will be open. Students are advised that all books must be bought or brought in between nine this morning and five this afternoon. The exchange will be cleared out some time next week. Any students who wish to buy or sell books be sure to bring them into the Exchange today.

The Book Exchange has had an extremely active season, some 1,700 books having been handled. At all times the stock was kept low under the demands of the students.

FLYING CLUB MEETS

The McGill University Flying Club will hold its first meeting to-night at 6 P.M. in Room 33 of the Engineering Building. Here only last year's members are invited, as a new executive will be elected and last season's business cleared up.

However, early next week, the first general meeting will be held and all students interested in gliding and soaring are cordially invited to attend. The purpose and activities of the club will be outlined, also applications for membership will be issued to those who are interested in joining.

As the club wishes to have flying completely organized as soon as possible, it is of utmost importance that all new members attend this first meeting.

Rivalry Between Towns
In Massachusetts, the towns of Concord, Acton and Lexington have long contended for the honor of winning the historic Revolutionary fight of April 19, 1775. One year, celebrating the event in Concord, an Acton official was called upon to say a few words. "I give you," he began, "the 19th of April, 1775, for which Concord furnished the field and Acton the men."

CORRECTION
"THE PIT."
In yesterday's story concerning the Pit, the Daily regrets any misunderstanding arising from an incorrect explanation of the Pit policy concerning dividends. On the co-operative basis that ownership vests in the consumers, dividends will be paid contingent always on the earnings being sufficient, and the amount of any dividends will depend entirely on this last factor.

TRANSVAAL'S LOAD OF POWER MOUNTS
Greater Activity of Gold Mines and Industry Boosts Electricity System

Johannesburg.—One of the best indications of mining, industrial and municipal activity on the Witwatersrand is the load curve of the Victoria Falls and Transvaal Power Company, Ltd. Ever since 1932, when the Union went off gold this curve has shown an upward trend, but development in the last 15 months has seen spectacular advances, both from the generating and the consuming sides.

Last year and the early months of 1937 saw the completion and putting into service of the first six 33,000 kw. turbo-generating sets at the Klip Power Station, 35 miles south of Johannesburg. At present the installed capacity of the Klip Station is 212,000 kw. The notified future demand has already been so great that the originally planned capacity of the station of some 350,000 kw has been increased to 431,000 kw. Three large turbo-generators will be put into operation next year and a further three sets have already been ordered.

Rising from 325,000 kw in December, 1935, to 400,000 kw in December, 1936, the maximum sustained hourly demand for electricity and compressed air on the power company's system achieved a new record figure of 465,000 kw. in December last. The total quantity of electricity and compressed air delivered to customers during 1936 was 2,330 million units, comparing with 1,952 million units in 1935. The company shares with its consumers the benefits of any improvement accruing from the expansion of business or other cause, and the increases in output have resulted in a material reduction of the price per unit. Last year the price was 0.29d. per unit, a reduction of 23 per cent. on the 1932 price.

At the moment the company sup-

AIR MAIL SERVICES
CAUSE CONFUSION

Some Drawbacks Found by
Merchants in South African Enterprise

Capetown.—Local business men are not altogether pleased with the South African postal authorities' enterprise in carrying all first-class mail by air.

The new system began on July 1, and provides that except on short journeys and when planes are not available, all letters will be carried by air without surcharge, not only by the new Imperial Airways flying boat service to Britain, but also within the Union.

The first few airmails from Britain under the new system were late, and there was a great deal of confusion in arrivals. Letters posted a week apart arrived on the same day, and in some cases "follow-up" letters arrived before the originals.

Business men in Capetown maintain that they should be allowed to send valuable mail matter by the slower but safer and more regular sea service as heretofore. For example, there is never much urgency in sending scrip by mail, whereas it is essential that it should travel by the safest possible means.

The Post Office reply is that the new service will soon settle down to clock-like regularity, that there is ample security with the new types of machine, and that if the public were allowed to designate the means of conveyance for their letters it would put an impossible burden on the sorting staff—South African News-Letter.

A Modern Miracle

The change in Turkey is one of the miracles of modern times. That the President-dictator, Mustafa Kemal, should have been able to persuade the whole Turkish official class to uproot themselves from Constantinople, where they had lived in considerable comfort, if not luxury, and to live and work in the new capital, Angora, is an extraordinary achievement of one man's will-power and discipline.

RAND LABOR SCARCITY

Lack of Men for Mines Is Big Problem

Johannesburg.—"The problem of labor supply is one of the greatest problems facing the South African mining industry today," said J. H. Hofmeyer, Minister of Mines, at the opening of the new Government Miners' Training School at Randfontein, on the West Rand.

The Minister expressed some anxiety as to the future of the labor problem, saying that it was an important matter to obtain skilled labor of the type of the white apprentices now being trained in the training schools, but it was also a difficult problem to maintain and supply all the native labour.

So far the needs had been met in spite of the increased demands of the mines, and local sources of recruitment had been fully explored. By a new legislative Act the Government had opened the door to the north for recruiting, but it should not be overlooked that a race countries would be imposing increasing demands on their natives for their own development requirements.

Of the 35,000 white miners employed on the Rand today, Mr. Hofmeyer said, 70 per cent. were South African born. Whereas in former days the mining industry had to depend on overseas labour supply, mostly Cornish miners, the Government Training Schools are now preparing 1,800 apprentices for a mining career, and it was hoped that this number would be increased greatly in the near future.—South African News-Letter.

The Ainus of Japan

The Ainus are now known as the aboriginal race of Japan but few realized the fact a generation or two ago or that a race some 3,000 years old was fast disappearing, until an Englishman decided to devote his life to the history of the Ainus and so make them known to both Japan and the world.

Unlucky Number Thirteen

In England, perhaps more than here, the number thirteen is feared and many are the attempts to evade the number in daily life. There is a story of a hotel manager who, desiring to rid the hotel of a certain lady, fixed the dining room chairs so that she would have to sit in chair number thirteen. She left the hotel rather than do so, but the next day she was killed in a motor accident.
